Meeting Individual Needs

Our aim is to provide accessible programs/ services that meet your individual needs, choices and requirements as well as helping you to be as independent as possible. We will ensure you feel safe and free from discrimination when you receive our services.

Our staff are skilled in supporting you to work towards your identified goals.

Before attending our program/ services, we will gather all required information from you so that we can understand your specific support requirements and identify your personal strengths to develop an approach tailored to your interests and personality.

Joining our service

We endeavour to get you connected to programs/ supports as soon as possible. The expected timeframe from enquiry to service provision is estimated to be 3-4 weeks, which allows us to request and receive back information, perform all necessary assessments, train, and allocate suitable staff.

Collecting your information

Before any services can commence, we will firstly gather your personal information and discuss your needs with you either in person or on the phone to establish the services to be provided.

Communication

It is imperative that we get to know you so that we can provide quality supports. In order to do so, we will meet with you from time to time in order to complete assessments, review support plans or for other reasons at your or our request.

You can expect to receive most correspondence via email or over the phone. If you have a preference, please inform our management team.

Please note that communication via email and phone is strictly between client and management and not to take place between clients and support workers.

Staffing and volunteers

In delivering some of our support we may use volunteers alongside our staff. We will let you know when we use volunteers.

All attempts are made to provide services at times that best suit you and with the same staff worker. There will be occasions when this will not be possible or where services may change. You will be advised of these changes.

Staff always endeavour to arrive on time, however at times this may not be possible due to unforeseeable circumstances such as an emergency or heavy traffic conditions. Please be patient if staff are late on the odd occasion as they are not responsible for circumstances beyond their control.
